

Shof'tim Answers

1. The king must be native born, not consumed with the accumulation of wealth, and knowledge of the Torah.
2. A native born king is more likely to understand the needs of his people and have empathy for those needs.
3. The king must not be obsessed with the accumulation of wealth. In other words, the king must not be primarily guided by amassing wealth while ruling over Yisrael.
4. The king must write himself a copy of the Torah. In other words, the king must intimately know HaShem and His commandments.
5. Yeshua was a native born Yisraelite, who was born in Yisrael and a descendent of David. Yeshua was not concerned with accumulating wealth. Yeshua, had the Torah written upon his heart. In fact, the Brit Hadashah refers to Yeshua as the living word.